
Have you ever had a really great idea, but then all of the sudden one of your friends or family member casually said the wrong thing and ruined everything? For some people, it can be particularly hard to get their ideas out without getting interrupted by someone who doesn't quite understand what they're trying to say. Luckily for us, recent technological advancements have made it easier than ever before for us to record our ideas with a video camera and send them in email without having to worry about making a fool out of ourselves. In this blog post I'll be going over the best websites and apps that will help you capture your thoughts into videos that are not only professional looking but will help you communicate your thoughts more effectively. Let's get started! Ustream is pretty much the best website out there when it comes to video conferencing. Unlike most other services, you won't have to worry about paying extra money to export your videos or make them private. All you will need is a decent internet connection and your done! They even have a mobile app for android devices that allows you to broadcast live video straight from your smartphone or tablet. Microsoft also has this great service called Office Mix which will allow you to create cool looking videos with multiple overlays, animations, music, transitions and many more cool things. All you need to do is record your video using your webcam or upload one, add in some cool animations and or transitions, add some narration and you've got yourself a great looking video. As the name suggests, PowToon is created for people who want to make animated videos. What's awesome about this service is that they already have tons of professionally looking templates that allow you to create awesome animations without having to pay any extra money. You can even create "How To" videos if the situation calls for it. They also have both desktop and mobile apps which will allow you to access your account anywhere in the world. Pluralsight is a great service for professionals and people who would like to learn new and advanced skills in their respective fields. Their main focus is teaching people how to build software and apply them in real world. They have tons of courses that you can watch on your computer, tablet or smartphone. One of the best things about their service is that they will analyze your video and assess your progress for free. Google Drive is a rather simple app, but it allows you to create videos from any of your Google Drive folders on your computer or phone. This service is great because it has both desktop and mobile apps. However it's important to note that the desktop app doesn't have drag and drop support, so if you don't want to use their built-in video editor it's best to upload your videos before editing them. Videolicious is another application that will allow you to record both audio and video files, but what makes it stand out is that you can either record using your webcam or upload previously recorded videos! What's also great about this app is that it's completely free! You will however need a YouTube account in order to save your videos. Google Docs has become one of the most popular services for writing documents.
